Atlas de l'Afrique : un continent émergent? [Atlas of Africa: An Emerging Continent?]

Éditions Autrement, France. 96 pages. ISBN 9782746763067. In French. 2022.

Portrays Africa at the beginning of the twenty-first century. The profound changes of the continent are addressed through: rapid but contrasting population growth; environmental fragilities, policies to protect threatened areas; the uncertain economic development, sketch of industrial renewal and expansion of services; tensions and recompositions between states and their societies; Africa in globalization. The 120 maps and infographics of this book help to better understand the dynamics of this little-known territory and to understand the challenges it faces in the age of globalization.

Atlas de l'invisible : cartes et infographies pour voir le monde d'un autre oeil [Atlas of the Invisible: Maps and Infographics To See the World From Another Perspective]

Autrement, France. 216 pages. ISBN 9782746762862. In French. 2022.

Atlases have been describing the world we see for centuries. This atlas takes the opposite of this principle to be an ode to the invisible, an ode to information that cannot be transmitted by simple words or figures. Our environment relies on an invisible set of data that grows with every action we take. James Cheshire and Oliver Uberti explore these hidden data with their insatiable curiosity and transform them into magnificent maps. So many phenomena that are revealed before our eyes thanks to original and rarely used cartographic projections thus drawing a new vision of the world.

Atlas de Paris : évolution d'un paysage urbain [Atlas of Paris: Evolution of an Urban Landscape]

Parigramme, France. 240 pages. In French. 2022.

The flow of centuries has shaped Paris. Paris today is the heir to more than two thousand years of history. By tirelessly rebuilding itself, the city has composed with the ghosts of its previous versions: such a street follows the crest of a forgotten rampart, this one is traced on the alley of a seigneurial domain, that one bypasses a demolished bastion... The Atlas of Paris, bringing together hundreds of maps, photographs, engravings and plans, sheds light on the process of formation of an urban landscape, highlights unsuspected relationships and invites you to discover the capital as you had never seen it before.

Atlas des curiosités géographiques [Atlas of Geographical Curiosities]

Jonglez, France. 157 pages. ISBN 9782361955311. In French. 2022.

Countries that don't really exist, the only city in the world almost entirely underground, a British hotel room that became Yugoslavian for a day, an island Spanish half the year and French the rest of the time, a city that boils down to a 14-storey skyscraper, the one and only railway installed outside its country... The world is full of geographical curiosities that are often the source of diplomatic or military tensions. Although often misunderstood, they nevertheless represent so many sparks likely to ignite the powder on the international scene.

Atlas des espaces maritimes de la France [Atlas of French Maritime Areas]

Editions Pedone, France. 327 pages. ISBN 9782233010056. In French. 2022.

France has the second largest maritime space in the world, behind the United States of America. Does that make it a maritime power? Without a doubt. We can congratulate ourselves or on the contrary regret the cost of mastering such a field. This is a question of a (very) long-term political vision. But any enlightened debate on this subject requires knowing the foundations, the extent, the consistency, the limits (in the literal and figurative sense of the word), the challenges, of these vast maritime spaces. This is the subject of this book.

Atlas des frontières insolites : enclaves, territoires inexistantes et curiosités géographiques [Atlas of Unusual Borders: Enclaves, Non-Existent Territories and Geographical Curiosities]

Armand Colin, France. 208 pages. ISBN 9782200633752. In French. 2022.

Borders are not immutable lines. Over time, they move, disappear, become more complex. Today, cities, islands and even houses that straddle borders retain a special status: enclaves, condominiums, quadripoints, no man's lands, buffer zones... By inviting us on a trip around the world to the discovery of these border curiosities, this very beautiful atlas invites both daydreaming and reflection.

Atlas des migrations dans le monde : libertés de circulation, frontières, inégalités [World Migration Atlas: Freedom of Movement, Borders, Inequalities]

Armand Colin, France. 160 pages. ISBN 9782200632823. In French. 2022.

This new atlas from the Migreurop collective offers an original and enlightening treatment of contemporary migration issues by addressing the issue of freedom of movement. This book offers elements that are both theoretical and drawn from the lived experience of migrants: putting into perspective the historical dynamics of freedom of movement, presentation of the large existing spaces of circulation, human migrations with regard to the migration of capital and goods, the forms of circulation implemented by the migrants themselves, and the contradictory imaginaries on the fact of migration.

Atlas des territoires éphémères : colonies manquées et bizarreries souveraines de l'Histoire de France [Atlas of Ephemeral Territories: Failed Colonies and Sovereign Oddities in the History of France]

Robert Laffont, France. 320 pages. ISBN 9782221264683. In French. 2022.

What do New France in Florida, Sable Island, French Western Australia or the Republic of Counani in Brazil have in common? Their names will mean absolutely nothing to you and yet these territories were French! Because if we know the former colonies of France, such as Louisiana or Canada, there have indeed existed dozens of short colonial establishments that our collective memory has obscured, when official history has not simply zapped them. This atlas is the story of these magnificent failures operated by colorful characters, explorers mandated by Paris or adventurers who improvise as conquerors in the name of the kingdom or the Republic.

Editions Parenthèses, France. 352 pages. ISBN 9782863643303. In French. 2022.

To know and, as the case may be, to defend, develop, exploit or submit a territory, the map constitutes an incomparable tool. Worked with high precision, its establishment has always mobilized the most advanced techniques to gather precious, even confidential information, long reserved for sovereigns, diplomats and officers. This work, whose starting point is the map of the Kingdom of France drawn up in the middle of the 18th century by the astronomer Cassini, presents all of the different cartographic series produced since then as well as their numerous thematic variations.

L'Atlas historique de la Terre [The Historical Atlas of the Earth]

Les Arènes, L'Histoire, France. 337 pages.
ISBN 9791037507181. In French. 2022.

The Earth, a modest planet revolving around a star, presents an extraordinary particularity, unique in the state of our knowledge: it shelters life. Among the abundance of life, humans have been able to dominate other species and transform the Earth to the point of jeopardizing their own future. With the help of the editors of L'Histoire and Sciences et Avenir/La Recherche, Christian Grataloup brought together more than thirty scientists (archaeologists, astrophysicists, biologists, climatologists, historians, planetary scientists, etc.) to produce the first atlas telling both the story of our planet Earth and that of the human adventure.

Le grand atlas des arbres et forêts [The Great Atlas of Trees and Forests]

Glénat, Le Monde/La vie, France. 240 pages.
ISBN 9782344055519. In French. 2022.

An initiatory journey in the heart of these wild worlds to understand everything about the trees of our planet. Forests are the green lung of our planet and it is essential to know how they work to preserve them. This reference work, published in collaboration with the newspaper Le Monde, seriously explains all the biological complexity of forests: their birth, their functioning, their conservation and protection, the life they shelter, the interdependence between fauna and flora, their relationship with nature and people, and more. Embellished with a very rich iconography of more than 250 magnificent photographs and a hundred maps, diagrams and computer graphics, this Grand Atlas is based on the latest scientific research related to the forest ecosystem, its relationship to climate change and its future within the biosphere.

Le grand atlas du Moyen Age [The Great Atlas of the Middle Ages]

Glénat, Le Monde/La vie, France. 400 pages.
ISBN 9782344055311. In French. 2022.

Spanning from the 5th to the 15th century - covering almost 1,000 years of history - the Middle Ages have long been dominated by superstitions and erroneous beliefs, reducing it to a period of obscurantism, regression and violence. However, the Middle Ages are immensely more complex. In 400 pages and rich in as many illustrations, this work offers the reader the opportunity to rediscover this key period in history through the countless reigning dynasties, among them the Merovingians, the Carolingians, the Capetians and the Valois. This veritable encyclopedia, published in collaboration with the newspaper Le Monde, is based on detailed maps, chronological friezes and extensive iconography to offer a complete understanding of this fascinating period, at the origin of the first bases of modern society.

Le grand atlas Homo sapiens [The Great Atlas of Homo Sapiens]

Glénat, Le Monde/La vie, France. 216 pages.
ISBN 9782344055557. In French. 2022.

This atlas allows you to follow in the footsteps of the first Homo sapiens outside Africa, their expansion in small groups, their cohabitation with the Neanderthal, Denisova and Florès in the prehistoric world. This book teaches how geography, history, ethnology and the natural sciences help define the framework in which we are the protagonists. Analysis of the most recent data from interdisciplinary scientific research is served in these pages by a very rich iconography of maps, diagrams, photographs, chronological tables, and reconstructions in dermoplasty.

Le marais et les îles : cartes et plans [The Marsh and the Islands: Maps and Plans]

La Geste, France. 266 pages. ISBN 9791035318253. In French. 2022.

This book invites you on a double wandering through the old maps and landscapes of the Vendée marshes, from the Bay of Bourgneuf to the harbor of La Gachère and Olonne to the south. The reproduced maps were chosen for their aesthetic qualities as well as for their documentary richness. They tell a double story: theirs and that of the spaces they represent. The history of maps goes very far back in time, sailors and earthlings also used them, but it was not until the Renaissance and the printing press that they became abundant.

L'empire des mers : atlas historique de la France maritime [The Empire of the Seas: Historical Atlas of Maritime France]

CNRS Editions, France. 300 pages. ISBN 9782271143846. In French. 2022.

"God gave France the empire of the seas" - Richelieu based this conviction on a kingdom open to three seas (Channel, Mediterranean and North Sea), one ocean (the Atlantic), and marine peoples as daring as they are experienced – Bretons, Normans, Basques or Provençals. From Philippe Auguste to Charles de Gaulle, from attempts to set up in Florida to the conquest of Louisiana, from the first arsenal in Rouen to Port 2000 in Le Havre, from the Battle of the Lock to that of Guetaria, Bretons criss-crossing the Pacific to the CMA-CGM container ships, from the first steam vessels to nuclear submarines, this atlas deploys the great epic of the France of the seas and its sailors.

Armand Colin, France. 155 pages. ISBN 9782200634599. In French. 2022.

Some of these iconic maps may still adorn the walls of primary school classrooms... Inseparable from the school of the 3rd Republic, these maps were ideal educational tools for reviewing the geography, earth sciences and geopolitics of the time. From the 1880s to the end of the 1960s, several generations of students learned to know France and the world thanks to these colorful maps imagined by the great geographer Paul Vidal-Lablache. This book brings together a unique collection of wall maps and invites today's reader on a journey through time and space.

Pour une histoire des cartes locales à la fin du Moyen Age et à la Renaissance = Towards a History of Local Maps in Medieval and Early Modern Europe

Le Passage, France. 304 pages. ISBN 9782847424836. In French and English. 2022.

A comparative study of local maps in Europe in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance through a set of texts written by the best specialists in the subject. If the existence of local maps is attested in Europe from the early Middle Ages in the West, their number increased considerably in the 15th and 16th centuries. They then become a common instrument of governance, responding to legal, administrative, political, ecclesiastical and economic uses, for various sponsors: courts of law, lords, urban councils, princes, communities of inhabitants or even simple individuals. This book aims to highlight the extent of this corpus and to initiate a comparative study of it on a European scale, through a set of texts written by the best specialists in the subject.

Global Census Archive from East View

East View presents the Global Census Archive® (GCA), an innovative program to collect officially published census-related materials from around the world.

This global collection contains GIS census data (GCA-GIS) as well as all available published volumes, questionnaires and other census ephemera (GCA-PUBS). Each census comes with an East View-produced census catalog, which serves as a finding aid and provides historical context.

East View provides a centralized publications platform and uniform GIS format for these materials, making a wide range of census assets easily accessible for discovery and analysis.

The listings below are a sample of available census publication collections and GIS census data. New content listed in blue. For the full list of available GCA-PUBS and GCA-GIS data, visit eastview.com/gca.

Note: GCA Publications and GIS census data programs are continually growing, with new countries and census years constantly being sourced. If there is a country you are interested in that does not appear on this list, please contact us to discuss availability and status.
